

Musaid Alkhamees

JEWELLERY · RIYADH

THE MARK

The letter khā, with a stone for its dot.

The mark is a letter, not a picture of a product. It is the khā – the first letter of Alkhamees – drawn as a single stroke whose weight swells and thins the way a broad-nib pen lays it down. The dot above it is a four-faceted diamond: it points at the stone without drawing one. The letter's internal proportions are set on a division of five, a quiet nod to the name that lives in the construction rather than on the surface. Everything else is deliberately absent – the mark has to read at a glance, with no caption to explain it.

Primary for everything above 12 mm · Seal for small sizes, wax stamps and metal · On gold reverses to onyx, never to white · Hallmark is the 3 mm engraving cut, tested on the actual piece before release

LOCKUPS

Three lockups, and no fourth.

The primary signature stacks the mark above the name – Arabic first, Latin beneath it, both centred on the mark's axis. The horizontal lockup exists for wide, shallow spaces: shopfront fascias, email footers, the top of an invoice. Below 12 mm the seal stands alone; at that size the wordmark closes up and stops being legible. Nothing else is authorised, and no one recombines these parts on the fly.

Clear space on all four sides is at least the height of the khā's dot · Minimum size is 12 mm wide for the full signature and 3 mm for the seal alone · Arabic always leads, including in English-language material

PALETTE

Ivory and gold outside, burgundy inside.

Gold is one flat colour with no gradient. A gradient is an attempt to imitate the shine of metal on a flat surface, and it never convinces; a single flat tone does, because it is what actually gets foiled onto paper and engraved into the metal itself. Burgundy is the interior colour only – box lining, the back panel of a vitrine, the surface a piece is photographed on. It appears the moment a box opens, which is what makes it land: colour arriving after the ivory calm outside.

Onyx #0B0B0C Ink, rules and fine detail	Champagne Gold #C9A227 The mark · Pantone 4028 C	Ivory #EDE7DC Paper, packaging, surfaces	Light Gold #E3C86A Hairline detail only	Stone #8A857D Secondary text and borders	Burgundy #6B2231 Interior only · near Pantone 505 C

Gold prints as foil, never as a four-colour build · On metal the mark is engraved in the metal's own colour, with no infill ·
Burgundy is for linings and backdrops – never a full wall, never a fascia · Do not set small ivory type on burgundy, and do not put light gold on a dark ground

TYPOGRAPHY

A composed Arabic hand, and a high-contrast Latin signature.

The first proposal replaced the Arabic wordmark with a plain geometric Kufi. That direction was dropped on review: stripped-back geometric Kufi reads as a property developer or a bank, not as an old family house. So the name keeps an Arabic face with real character – a modern Kufi with open counters and decided corners – and the modernity is carried by the mark and the Latin instead. Latin is a signature voice: Didot on certificates, cards and the fascia, never for running text.

WORDMARK

الخميس

Modern Kufi · drawn once, then converted to outlines

ARABIC HEADLINE

بريقُ يورث لا يقلد

Headlines across the site and print

LATIN SIGNATURE

AL KHAMEES

Didot · signatures and certificates only, not body copy

BODY

Shaped from the choice of stone to the final detail

10–12 pt · 1.75 line height

APPLICATIONS

The identity on the storefront,
and on what she carries home.

Storefront

Full signature on an otherwise empty fascia. No strapline, no phone number.

Boxes

The mark alone, blind-debossed with no colour at all.

Carrier bag

Signature centred on the face, just below the cord.

Gift box

Gold-foiled mark on the inside of the lid, seen only on opening.

Stationery

Gold wax seal on deckle-edged cotton stock.